Knights and Ladies of Honor. Marion Lodge conferred the degree upon one applicant last Wednesday evening. Pleasant Lodge, of Brightwood, will have work at its next meeting in the initiatory

Indiana Lodge initiated one applicant and reinstated two members last Thursday Supreme Treasurer E. J. McBride has been quite ill for the past six weeks, but is convalescing. The offices of Washington Lodge are filled by ladies, except those of secretary, treasurer and guardian. The Rev. Jonathan F. Woodruff, late pastor of the Madison-avenue M. E. Church. whose funeral occurred last Tuesday, was a member of Hope Lodge. Grand Protector Byrd is much disappointed at his not being able to visit the several lodges of the city during his stay here while serving as Senator. The membership of the order Jan. 1 was 71,004, and total benefits paid to date amounted to $5,315,714,62. There is anet insurance now in force of $72,032,000.

Washington Lodge conferred the degree upon three applicants last Monday evening in the presence of Grand Protector Byrd. Past Supreme Protector Macbeth and a delegation from Marion and Phonix lodges. Washington Lodge has recently procured robes for its degree team, and they were worn for the first time on this occasion. The work was highly commendable.

Sons of America.

John Wreeck was presented with a beautiful pin of the order as a token of esteem for his assistance in making the late enter-

Steps are being taken to organize a State camp, and new camps are being formed all over the State. The one at Frankfort is the latest, and it is composed of the best men of the town. A new camp will be organized in this city in a short time. All information in regard to it will be furnished by W. A. Es-bach, No. 117 West Maryland street, or Benj. Crane, at the postoffice. The Patriotic Order of Sons of America is entitled to the honor of first urging placing of flags on public school buildings throughout the United States. The order always takes part in such ceremonies. Order of Equity.

A new council was instituted at Logansport Friday evening by Deputy F. M. Hay. Indianapolis Council admitted two members at its last meeting and received several applications. On March 12 a musical and literary entertainment will be given. The reception and hop given by Taylor Council Friday evening was a success, a arge number of members participating in the enjoyments of the evening. Supper was served and dancing indulged in to a late hour, with music from Zumpf's Orchestra.

SPRING FASHIONS.

The large picture hats will have a triumphant summer season. Uncut velvet ribbons are not likely to receive a very enthusiastic welcome, from the fact that they are dust-retainers.

dotted, striped and double-faced satin ribbons in single and combination colors. Jeweled nets for the back of the hair, and other curious varieties known to the past generation and in favor when middle-aged women were young, are being resuscitated. But no mode is ever faithfully reproduced. The caterers of fashion understand too well that this would be bad for trade.

Their place will be filled by shot, polka-

Ribbon trimming will be used upon many of the pretty wash dresses, which are made with Gretchen skirts, with a very deep hem, a full bodice of tinted or white chambray, and a square or rounded jacket with bishop sleeves, the jacket trimmed with white cotton braid if the ribbon is not

As a rule, the spring round skirt has few ornaments, and when made of plaid fabrics none whatever are used. What variety is needed is given by varying the arrangement of the plaid in cutting. The whole gown may be bias or only part of it, as the skirt-front bias and the back breadths straight or bias and pleated all around. Paillette, a soft corn shade; laurier, a pale rose pink; bergere, a creamy pink; sene, a medium shade of dahlia pink; pompadour, a silvery blue; magnolia, a creamy white; Watteau, a pale Nile green; muguet, a light tint of yellow green, and echevin and perse, both pretty shades in lavender, are all among the highly popular dyes in spring dress fabrics.

Stylish spring costumes of fine cheviot or Venetian cloth have loose waists of folded silk, belted, and worn with three-quarter jackets that have open fronts cut without darts. Waistcoats of gray, tan, magnoliawhite or pale-apricot silk are as fashionable as ever, and the most elaborate and expensive gilets are trimmed with Venetian embroideries dotted with fine-cut mock

Black materials are always in vogue to a certain extent, but they take quite a prominent place in present fashions. Black striped silks and satins are made up with full leg-o'-mutton sleeves of black velvet. velvet girdle, yoke vest, or with diagonal bodice trimmings of velvet ribbon. Other black silks and other black fabrics of handsome quality are trimmed with nets, elegant black laces, gnipure embroideries, and, lastly, with costly and beautiful Persian arabesques en applique. Some of the new shirt-waists of white China silk are laid in box-pleats, with a flat edging on each pleat of very narrow white silk lace, with a finish of the same on the collar. White and black lace blouses are fitted over close silk waist-linings, the outside fabric being seamless, with the exception of the under-arm seam. Some of these delicate waists are in simple blouse form, others have a scantily gathered flounce of lace about ten inches deep sewed to the belt of the blouse, and the joining covered with ribbon.

Dotted pique or Marseilles vests, low cut, with notched revers and collar exactly like women who affect masculine modes in dress. Added to these striking garments are English shirts in dotted or striped per-cale, with standing collar and wristbands fastened with jeweled links; a four-in-hand scarf or a loose silk tie knotted a la marine and a row of tiny stude down the shirt-front complete the tout ensemble. Above all will be worn a Henri Denx coat of mel-ton or tweed, and during the summer the Stanley silk scarf, matching the percale stripe or dot in color, will be folded loosely
